

Daniel Donahoo

Daniel Donahoo works at the intersection of play, technology and learning, as Digital Learning Producer at Deeper Richer and Director at Project Synthesis. Beginning his career as a toy librarian and casual childcare worker, Daniel has spent two decades researching, writing, advising and designing experiences around children's digital media literacy.

Daniel has advised leading app developers such as Toca Boca and worked alongside large tech companies Apple and Google and has developed a wide range of digital learning and play experiences for children.

As a well-regarded speaker and facilitator, Daniel aims to help children and young people learn how best to use technology in ways that support their learning and development.
